The Computer Loan Program

Operated out of Southern Connecticut State University's Center for Adaptive Technology, this loan program helps students with disabilities get the assistive technology and adaptive software they need. We do this by giving every Connecticut school the opportunity to borrow a laptop or iPad for students with disabilities. Technology can be borrowed for any number of reasons including evaluations, to replace a computer while one is being repaired, for a trial of the software or for staff capacity building. Laptops and iPads are available on a first-come, first-served basis and can be borrowed for up to four months.

Laptops come with the following adaptive software:

- Kurzweil 3000
- Co: Writer Solo
- Word Q
- Speak Q
- Dragon Naturally Speaking
- Other adaptive software may be available by request

iPads are loaned with a variety of educational applications already installed.

If there is a specific software program or application that a school or student would like to try, a request can be made to have it installed. The Center for Adaptive Technology will try to accommodate these requests.

Make the first move towards greater independence today.
